

Chicago Style Guide

16th ed. (REF Z 253 C57 2010)

The following are examples of frequently used forms of citation. For more explanation and further examples, see The Chicago Manual of Style, 16th ed. (in the library at REF Z 253 C57 2010). Keep up with what's new in Chicago Style at <http://www.chicagomanualofstyle.org/home.html>

When you use another person's ideas in your paper, even if you put the author's ideas into your own words, you must cite (i.e. credit) the source. Endnotes or footnotes are brief credits in the body of a paper (see page 12 for more information on notes).

A bibliography is a complete list at the end of a paper of all the sources consulted during the research process. Sources consulted in the course of writing a paper must appear in the bibliography. The bibliography begins on a separate page, entitled "Bibliography," at the end of the paper.

Formatting

- Double-spaced
- Serif typeface (e.g. Times New Roman), 12 pt.
- Use italics for the title of a book, journal, magazine, newspaper or video

Bibliography

- Double-spaced
- Hanging indent (in Word 2007 use Paragraph > Special > Hanging)
- Alphabetized, first author is inverted, and main elements are separated by periods

Endnotes or Footnotes

- Double-spaced
- Numbered entries which correspond to superscripted note reference numbers in the text
- Direct quotations and paraphrasing or referring to an idea contained in another work: page, paragraph, or section number is required
- Authors' names in normal order and elements separated by commas or parentheses

Electronic Retrieval Statement (for online documents)

In order of preference:

- doi:xxxxxxx
- URL
- Name of Library Database (accession number or other identifying number)

SECONDARY SOURCES

Citations taken from a secondary source

- N: 1. Louis Zukofsky, "Sincerity and Objectification," Poetry 37 (February 1931): 269, quoted in Bonnie Costello, Marianne Moore: Imaginary Possessions (Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1981), 78.
- N: 2. Zukofsky, "Sincerity," 94.
- B: Zukofsky, Louis. "Sincerity and Objectification." Poetry 37 (February 1931): 263-775. Quoted in Bonnie Costello, Marianne Moore: Imaginary Possessions. Cambridge, MA: Harvard University Press, 1981.

TIP: Secondary source = the book or article you have in your hand

Primary source = the quotation taken from the secondary source that originally came from a book or article you do not have access to.

Use secondary sources sparingly, for instance, when the original work is out of print, unavailable through usual sources, or not available in English.

ENDNOTES OR FOOTNOTES

Endnotes or footnotes serve the following purposes:

1. They indicate the exact source of every quotation used.
2. They acknowledge indebtedness to others for ideas and opinions.
3. They give authority for a fact that the reader might be inclined to doubt. No note is required for facts that may be regarded as matters of common knowledge and that are generally accepted as true.
4. They provide information which, if it were included in the essay itself, would interrupt the flow of the argument.

To use endnotes or footnotes, place a note number in the text of the essay at the end of a sentence, at the end of a quotation, or at a specific point of reference such as a statistic included in the sentence. Relative to other punctuation, the number follows any punctuation mark except for the dash, which it precedes. Use superscript<sup>1</sup> or brackets (1) for the note number.

Number the notes consecutively through the body of the essay. Notes may be placed in a consecutive list at the end of the essay (endnotes) or may be placed at the bottom of each page (footnotes).

Italicize the titles of books and journals; put quotation marks around the “titles of articles.” Never put quotation marks around an italicized title, unless those quotation marks are part of the title.

Second or Subsequent References

When a source is used a second time, its endnote/footnote is given in a shorter form. The short form should include enough information to remind readers of the full title or to lead them to the appropriate entry in the bibliography.

1. If the work and the author remain the same and if you are using only one book or article by that author, simply give the author’s last name and page reference.
2. If you are using two or more works by an author, you must indicate which of the works you are citing. Use the last name, a shortened title, and page reference.
3. If you use two authors with the same last name, give the full name in the shortened reference.
